WHY LATE?

A study of some two hundred fatal cases of cancer in one Canadian province reveals the explanations given for the delay in diagnosis which lead to such unfortunate results.

"I didn't think it was serious" was the most common explanation. Why they did not think it was serious is seen in other related explanations: "It had never given me any pain." "I thought it was just indigestion (or piles) (or constipation) or some such commonplace condition."

Much of the sad story is told in these simple statements. So many seem to be unable to believe that any thing which does not cause pain can be serious. Early cancer is seldom accompanied by pain, and as pain seems to be firmly fixed in the public mind as the inevitable symptom of serious disease, its absence would seem to be reassuring. Pain is a common danger signal, but the sooner it is realized that dangerous conditions may exist without pain, the sooner will more cases of cancer come under treatment in the early stages when cure is possible.

It is quite true that the most common cause of blood in the stool is haemorrhoids. Nevertheless, there is no way of making sure whether the cause is haemorrhoids or an early cancer other than by means of a proper examination. It is remarkable how many people feel safe as long as they do not know the truth. "I was afraid it was cancer," when given as an explanation, really means "I hoped that it was not cancer and really did not want to be told if it was." Surely this is neither a reasonable nor a sensible attitude towards what may be a life-or-death matter.

There is only one thing to fear about cancer, and that is that it may not be recognized early enough. Any more which does not heal and stay healed, discharges or blood from an office of the body, lumps in the breast, indigestion after food—any of these should be investigated promptly.

In most cases, these symptoms will not be due to cancer, but prompt attention to them means the early recognition of many cases of cancer. Early cancer is curable, because in its early stages, it is a local disease which can be eradicated. Later, when it has spread, the possibility of complete removal of the growth, is generally lost.

Do not wait! Do not be one of the late ones!

SLIM-FITTING SLIP

Pattern 8505. Slim and well-made foundation garments are a necessity to every woman whatever her age or size, but the large woman particularly needs to have her lingerie smooth and form-fitting so that the chic appearance of her gowns will not be marred by "bunchy" undergarments.

The clever and modish slip shown in the sketch is so well designed and sensible that it will appeal to every woman. The built-up shoulder, for instance, is extremely comfortable (the straps never fall off). The moderate V of the neckline makes it possible to wear under most any frock except the backless evening frock. It is form-fitted by means of bust and waist darts and the skirt has sufficient width for comfortable walking.

CERTIFIED SEED POTATOES

With the increasing prevalence and number of diseases of potatoes and the greater risk in purchasing seed about which nothing is known by the purchaser, has come the realization that the production of high class seed requires special care. A very satisfactory system of seed potato certification has been developed in Canada by the Division of Botany, Central Experimental Farms Branch, and is based upon two field inspections of the growing crop, and of the tubers after harvest. Only seed potatoes which meet the standard for certification are eligible for sale as Certified Seed, and official tags are supplied for every package of such seed. Therefore, the Government tag is not on the package, the potatoes are table stock only and seed prices should not be paid. There are two grades only of seed potatoes, "Certified Extra No. 1" and "Certified Small Sized 16-3." If these tags do not specify either of these grades, the potatoes are not seed potatoes.

There is definite need of field inspection for seed potatoes as certain virus diseases are not observable in the tubers and can only be identified in the growing plants. Obviously only low yields can be expected from diseased plants. It is a big mistake to conclude that good seed potatoes can be selected by tuber appearance alone.

There are no regulations in effect which prevent anyone from using any kind of potatoes for seed purposes, and some of the stores are selling table potatoes in their seed departments, but it is the purchaser's privilege, if he pays more than regular table stock prices, to demand the official tag, otherwise he may get only table stock.

Well over a million bushels of certified seed potatoes have been sold annually for the past nine years. The bulk of the seed produced is exported. The best potato growers in other countries appear to appreciate the value of good seed and in spite of plentiful local supplies will pay the additional freight and tariff charges to secure Canadian Certified potatoes. Growers are advised to secure their supplies immediately as seed stocks are getting very low. Lists of growers having seed for sale are obtainable, free, from the Dominion Botanist, Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa.

SOWING THE FORAGE SEED PLOT

When sowing crested wheat grass the essential considerations are sowing early, shallow and on a firm seed bed.

By early sowing is meant as soon as possible in the spring after the land is workable. It is advisable to seed crested wheat grass before sowing wheat. Shallow sowing for this crop means not more than half an inch. Shallow sowing is only possible on a firm seed bed which invariably means packing, releasing the pressure springs for the disks and removing the drag chains.

Crested summer-fallow land is preferred. Choose a spot where drifting is not liable to occur. The small area required should be cultivated, cross-harrowed and packed in quick succession. The packer should be weighted and all operations done while the soil is moist.

Make sure the drill cups are thoroughly cleaned to permit free-running of the small seed. All moving parts of the drill should be in good working order before starting. The drill cups should be checked frequently and as accurately as possible for the rate required, using shims or thin washers where possible, to make the rows uniform. Each run used for seeding in rows should be partitioned off snugly with heavy cross-harrow or heavy roller on each side of cup used. Crested wheat grass when well cleaned flows freely along through the ordinary grain drill, but it is advisable to make sure the seed is always running during seeding. To seed three pounds of crested wheat grass per acre in rows three feet apart the average drill should be set at three-quarters of a bushel for wheat. Every effort should be made to seed the rows as straight as possible.

In the case of brome and sweet clover, seeding can be delayed until after grain seeding is finished, but not later than the end of May. Seeding these crops on spring ploughed land soil at this date has also given good results. Shallow seeding and firm soil are again necessary. For seeding the amount required of sweet clover and brome, through the ordinary drill, another material must be mixed with the seed. For the purpose of cracked wheat, the most suitable. The wheat should be coarsely crushed and the fine material removed with a fanning mill using wheat cracked in about four parts. In the case of sweet clover, it is mixed in the proportion of three parts of cracked wheat, by weight, to one part of sweet clover, and the drill set at one and a quarter bushels for wheat. Brome is mixed in the proportion of five parts of cracked wheat, by weight, to one part of brome, and the drill set at five bushels for wheat. The drill settings should show these forage crops at the rate of three pounds per acre in rows three feet apart. Rows should be partitioned off as described for crested wheat.

For seeding a small area in rows a small garden seed drill can be used to excellent advantage, when no cracked wheat will be required. During the first year or two weeds grow in the row with the plants do not pull them but they should be clipped with a mower. This will not retard the young plants or the seed crop for next year.

On sandy soils or other types of land where drifting is liable to occur, wheat (or oats for brome) may be sown in between the rows in the same operation, by placing grain in the portions of the drill partitioned off, containing five runs. When this method is used, no grain should be mixed with the forage seed, and the drill settings outlined above must be used. This nurse crop should be cut for green feed soon after heading.

CHANGE ALLOWANCE TO DESERTED WIVES

Repeal of the period under which a deserted wife may qualify for a "mother's" allowance was approved by the legislature recently, in accepting an amendment proposed by Gerald O'Connor, Lib., Edmonton.

Formerly the period of desertion necessary before a woman could come under the act was seven years, for which time the husband was "presumed dead." The amendment reduces the period to five years for any married woman deserted by her husband "without reasonable cause."

The marks on paint made by scratching matches there may be removed by running over them with a cut lemon.

"VICTIM OF HEART DISEASE"

When a man or woman dies suddenly, and without visible cause, the newspapers announce that the deceased was "a victim of heart disease." In the majority of cases the cause of death was nothing of the kind, but—it sets the public mind at rest. It is so easy to lay the blame on this most noble, much-abused organ. Still the fact confronts us stubbornly when we see several vital organs, the heart is easily first. We should therefore render the heart due respect, and take the best possible care of it.

Perhaps overloading is one of the most serious offenses against a normal heart—and it is accomplished by over-eating. Roughly speaking the heart lifts eighteen pounds of blood seventy-two times per minute—or 1,296 pounds per hour—and for a single day, multiply by 24. It runs into tons per month! This supposes you weigh 150 pounds; if you are heavier—think of it! The thing is almost bewildering. I may be in error, but I have seen a man I am thinking along right lines.

The unnecessary food that we are continually piling up in the stomach, and which is later thrown into the circulation by the absorbents, and more than half of it undigested—is the heart to blame if it fails. The heart is often blamed for failure, when the over-eating is the real cause.

Probably shortness of breath and faintness are first symptoms that lead one to suspect a burdened heart. Pain over the heart is more often due to neuritis of intercostal nerves. Palpitation is a warning signal. heed it. You would fight if you were treated as we insult the heart. Kidneys are responsible for many deaths attributed to the heart and next come bacteria from a diseased throat.

Star's Garden Service

By GORDON LINDSAY SMITH

Two of the most serious faults committed by the average gardener in both the flower and vegetable end of the business are too deep planting of seeds and lack of thinning after the plants are up.

A good safe rule advocated by those who know all about the art of good gardening is to cover the seed to a depth equal to about three times the diameter. Now the beginner is not advised to procure a pair of calipers and work out the diameter of the great variety of seeds he or she hopes to plant. This is a rough rule only. With tiny seed like that of the poppy or the onion, seed about the size of a grain of sugar, merely pressing into the soil will be sufficient. With large things like gladiolus and dahlias bulbs or potatoes, this rule will call for depth of several inches. With peas, beans and corn it will mean about an inch.

Thinning is Important

Too much stress can hardly be laid on the necessity of thinning. With the fine seeded things like the aliums, lettuce, onions and lettuce, much grief and back breaking labor can be saved if the seed is sown thinly. Mixing with a little dry sand before sowing will help spreading thinly. With the bigger things, beets, beans, peas, cosmos, marigolds, nasturtiums and such things it is difficult to space the seed. After the plants come up one is urged to stop and consider just how big these are going to be in a few weeks. Seed as a rule is small, so are acorns. But the size is no guarantee of the size of the height of the resulting plants. It may only be six inches, in which case the plants should need only be spaced a few inches apart. But suppose it is the cosmos or the large type of zinnias or marigolds that are being considered. These will reach from 18 inches to four feet when fully grown. Such things require much room on all sides if symmetrical and sturdy plants that will be both beautiful and storm resisting, are to be the result. Crowded plants will inevitably be spindly and weak in the stem. Experts advise allowing about half as much space between as the plant will be high.

This is also a good rule to apply to most shrubbery.

Rock Gardens

Level flower gardens and lawns may be the easiest to handle, but where the owner is prepared to go to a little extra trouble, more striking results can certainly be obtained with ravines and slopes. Where the ground falls away very rapidly it will be necessary to arrange in short terraces. On these rock gardens can be laid out with level stretches of grass in between. Rock gardens are made to resemble miniature alpine ranges, and in them alpine flowers are grown. These are usually little short sprawly things, that require little moisture during most of the year. They are specially listed in the better seed catalogues. To hold the sharply sloping soil, fair size rocks of the roughest possible nature, preferably weather beaten boulders, are buried to about two thirds their depth irregularly throughout the slope. Good pockets of sandy soil are arranged between the rocks. The flowers find a foothold here and trail over the boulders.

Shrubby and trees are arranged as background for these rock gardens. An odd tree will do no harm as most of the rock plants are not too some shade. If necessary through the garden will be placed convenient steps for passage up and down the steep levels. Nothing of course is quite so suitable for this purpose as rough flag stones, though a little finished masonry may be used effectively here and there for remaining walls and for sides of the steps.

Cultivation

During the early part of the season a little cultivation every week will help plants along wonderfully. The purpose is twofold: to keep weeds are killed and valuable moisture is conserved. Growth is hurried along. Later on as the flowers or vegetables develop it will not be necessary to cultivate so often. Sometimes a mulch of short straw or grass clipping will be invaluable moisture during the summer. This mulch is simply spread over the ground between the plants. It keeps the underlying soil moist, open and free from weeds.

HOW IT STARTED

TO BREAK THE ICE

No sphere of human activity can boast immunity against pilferage by metaphor.

Among other interesting fields is that of navigation in frozen waters. Here, breaking the ice is a difficult and distasteful but routine matter, which must be gotten over and with it, therefore, settled down to and performed with a matter-of-factness and energy, regardless of the arduousness of the task.

It is in allusion to this hard and unpleasant business that we have the phrase, "breaking the ice," in connection with initiating laborious or distressing situations which simply must be resolved.

One of the earliest recorded uses of the expression is by Shakespeare in his "Taming of the Shrew," Act I, Scene 2, published in 1594.

DOCTOR

"Doctors," wrote Voltaire, "are men who prescribe medicines of which they know little, to cure diseases of which they know less, to human beings of whom they know nothing at all."

This typical use of the word "doctor" in the sense of one who practices medicine is a development from its early significance which was quite different from what it enjoys today.

We have "doctor" from the Latin doctor, teacher, its original reference being simply to a learned man.

This early sense is still retained in academic titles such as "Doctor of Philosophy." To the original purpose of which was to honor as well as to designate a person so well-versed in any department of knowledge as to be able to teach it to all.

With the passing of the years, and possibly because people who were learned and intelligent could treat physical ailments as easily as medical the word came more and more to acquire its specialized connotation synonymous with "physician."

Embroidery, laces and fine lingerie which have become badly yellowed may be made snowy white by boiling in water with a little bluing and the juice of a lemon have been added.

When towels become dingy, put them in a pan of cold water with soap and lemon juice. Heat gradually to boiling point. Rinse in lukewarm water and blue as usual.

BRITAIN WILL NOT CONSIDER STORING WHEAT

WINNIPEG. Canadian wheat board "would not consider" storing any wheat in Britain to prevent a shortage in the event of a national emergency, J. R. Murray chairman, said last week in discussing the plan urged editorially by the London Times. "Our board has not been placing any difficulties in the way of the free export of Canadian wheat," Mr. Murray said, "and there is no reason for our shipping wheat abroad unsold."

IF EVERY CITIZEN WERE LIKE YOU

Here's a poser from the Glasgow Herald that will apply to any place:

"Would your town be a better or poorer one if every citizen was like you? That is a fair question to ask yourself. What are you doing in the way of suggesting something for the bettering of conditions in your town? So many citizens, in fact the great majority of citizens, are content to mind their own business, and give no thought whatever of how conditions in their own town might be improved socially, from a business standpoint, educationally and morally. Many suggestions do you offer in the year as to local improvements, and how they might help start, in a small way, some new industry? In other words, is your town the better, the poorer or just of no account because of you living here? Make the people you meet from outside feel that they are the most welcome guests who ever come to town. It does not cost anything to be courteous and pleasant to those who come to town even from the neighboring villages. It is the friendly spirit of co-operation and Christian love that keeps the world going. Why not make it a community spirit? Someone has said: "There isn't much to be seen in a little town but what you hear makes up for it." That is very true, but not in the way that it was intended. Sometimes what you hear in the way of gossip may tickle the ears of the evil minded and stretch the imagination of those who seem to take a delight in spreading false reports, but it is not helpful to the well being of your town."

THE RED CROSS ON THE JOB

Calamities such as the disastrous floods which have swept over the northeastern part of the United States are in the particular field in which the American Red Cross functions. Hardly had the first news of the first of these flood disasters appeared in print before the Red Cross was on the job. It is an army of relief that is always mobilized.

The duties of the Red Cross in emergencies like this cover every means of relieving human suffering. It provides shelter for the homeless. It feeds the hungry. It furnishes medical care and nursing aid for the sick.

It looks especially after the welfare of the child victims of disaster. It finds clothing for those who need it, financial help to tide over the crisis for those whose resources have been suddenly swept away. It places in place into which no other agency quite fits, in a spirit of helpfulness as broad and free as humanity itself.

To meet such calls, always sudden, the Red Cross must keep its resources for relief always liquid. When the need for its help covers such a broad area as the present need does, it has to draw heavily upon its stores of supplies and of cash, and to call upon all men and women of kindly spirit toward their fellow-beings in distress to contribute in money what all cannot give in service. The Red Cross is a voluntary organization. Its work in the field is almost entirely done by unpaid workers. It has no subsidy or appropriation from the Government, but carries on entirely by the aid of contributions.

The Red Cross is calling now for contributions to meet the cry for aid from the flood-stricken regions. It is the part of good citizenship as well as of good will toward those who suffer, for everybody to respond to the call, and give all he can.

A THOUGHT FOR EASTER

From the beginning of time, men have hailed the coming of Spring as the resurrection of the earth from the death of Winter. Long before the Christian Era began, every religious cult celebrated in one way or another the returning season of growth and sunshine, with its promise of life beyond the grave. If the more glorious forms, that we earth-bound folk could see, should man alone die to rise no more?

A few days ago the whole Christian world joined in testifying, on Easter Sunday, to its faith that death is not the end, that life goes on forever, in new and unknown but more glorious forms, that we earth-bound folk could see, should man alone die to rise no more?

The belief that this is true, that there is a life beyond death, a life of release from toil and sorrow for such as truly believe and strive to live up to their belief has been the most powerful force in the history of our modern civilization. In this faith men have found a common tie of mutual service for the common good. All of the concepts of duty, honor, self-denial, self-respect and loyalty upon which great nations have been founded derive from faith which is the very root and heart of Christianity.

Let no one say that the faith of our fathers is outmoded, that it no longer has its old power to inspire our lives. We are living in troublous times, and those of little faith are failing, the old beliefs are dead. But even as they scoff, Spring brings her perennial symbols of the eternal life. And this Easter Sunday millions upon millions of believers meet to testify anew to the truth that their faith is a living faith, that it still rules the hearts of men.

yourself. What are you doing in the way of suggesting something for the bettering of conditions in your town? So many citizens, in fact the great majority of citizens, are content to mind their own business, and give no thought whatever of how conditions in their own town might be improved socially, from a business standpoint, educationally and morally. It does not cost anything to be courteous and pleasant to those who come to town even from the neighboring villages. Someone has said: "There isn't much to be seen in a little town but what you hear makes up for it." That is very true, but not in the way that it was intended. Sometimes what you hear in the way of gossip may tickle the ears of the evil minded and stretch the imagination of those who seem to take a delight in spreading false reports, but it is not helpful to the well being of your town."

HAVE A LOOK IN A MIRROR

What kind of a face are you carrying around underneath your hat? What kind of an advertisement is your countenance for the fellow who lives behind it? "I am bald-headed," writes R. F. Fulkerson, in the Kiwanis Magazine. "I have to wear spectacles. My nose is too big for my face. My mouth is twisted so that one corner goes up and the other goes down, and my chin recedes like the chin of a sheep. The best that can be said about me is that my face is quaint. In a contest for Mr. America, I would run last in a field of a thousand."

These things are not my fault, however. But one thing is my fault. I can at least make my homely mug a pleasant one to look at. It is my advertisement to the world, and I have no business letting it look sour as well as homely. My wife is used to it and so doesn't suffer so much. My baby is not old enough to realize what a homely daddy she has. But I owe it to other people who have to look at me to wear a smile on the dog-eared thing.

"If there is any moral to all this, you will find it in your bathroom mirror."

DO YOU WANT TO KEEP YOUNG?

Hold your thoughts persistently. Avoid fear in all its varied forms of expression.

Simply refuse to grow old by counting your years or anticipating old age.

Don't allow yourself to think of your birthday, that you are a year older.

Avoid excesses of all kinds; they are injurious. The long life must be a temperate regular one.

Keep mental cobwebs, dust and brain ashes brushed off by frequent trips to the country.

Never look on the dark side; take sunny views of everything; a sunny thought drives away the shadows.

Keep your mind young by fresh, vigorous thinking, and your heart sound by cultivating a cheerful, optimistic disposition.

Don't live to eat, but eat to live. Many of our ills are due to overeating and eating wrong things, also to irregular eating habits.

Don't be too ambitious; the cancer of over-ambition has eaten up the happiness of many a life.

Keep busy; idleness is a great friend of age, but an enemy of youth. Regular employment and mental occupation are marvellous youth preservers.

Pure air, both indoors and outdoors, is absolutely essential to health and long living. Never allow yourself to remain in a poisoned or vitiated atmosphere.

Don't let anything interfere with your regular hours of work and rest. Get plenty of sleep, especially before midnight.

Refuse to allow the mind to stiffen the muscles by the suggestion of age limitations. Age is a mental state, brought about by mental conviction. You are only as old as you feel.

Avoid anger, discord, hurry or anything else that exhausts vitality or over stimulates; whatever frets, worries or robs you of peace or sleep, will make you prematurely old.

ALBERTA NEWSPAPERS ON THE SPOT

The Alberta government has decreed that newspapers in the province cannot publish advertisements for breweries or distilleries after April 30th on moral grounds, as the premier stated some time ago.

We feel that the government's position in this matter is wrong, says the Viking News.

First of all it decreases purchasing power. The publisher will be deprived of a source of revenue that assists in paying wages, taxes, added sales tax, rents, licenses, and many other bills that have to be paid.

Secondly, the government has not come forward with anything to replace this source of revenue.

Thirdly, revenue that is now coming to Alberta in this way will be absorbed by papers not published in this province. Newspapers and magazines carrying advertisements of this nature cannot be stopped from coming into the province.

It is just as unusual for the government mouthpiece, The Calgary Herald, to run ads of this nature now, as they are and have been doing, as at any time before or after April 30th.

If the government is going to prohibit newspapers (whose stock in trade is space to sell) from doing business with the breweries, then the Alberta government should prohibit, say the Calgary Power Co. from selling them (the breweries) electrical energy, the farmers from selling their barley, the paper companies, paper boxes, the railways, transportation of products, in fact the Alberta government should quit buying the products of the breweries for resale at a profit to citizens of Alberta.

We would at least expect the government to let the newspapers carry on until they issue the basic dividends which they have promised.

That's all we ask.

THE TRUE MEANING OF "THE TRINITY"

Being a bible lecture talk by Judge Rutherford (continued).

The so-called "holy trinity" is one of the false doctrines taught by men. Many clergymen become very angry when the people are told the truth about the "trinity" doctrine. Some of them testified before the Congressional Committee that a criticism of the "trinity" is so offensive to them that no man should be permitted to use the radio to tell the people about it. Error always objects to being opposed.

The doctrine of the "trinity" has its origin with the Devil and was made prominent in the satanic religions of ancient Babylon and Egypt. It was first introduced into the so-called "Christian church" by a Greek priest in the fourth century. It is a false doctrine because it is contradictory to God's Word. The "trinity" doctrine is that there are "three gods in one, the Father, the Son and the Holy Ghost, equal in power, substance and eternity." The clergymen call it "a mystery" because they neither understand it nor can explain it, and they therefore discourage the people in trying to find out the real truth about the doctrine. The clergy say, "God is one, Jesus is one, and the Holy Ghost is one, and these three added together make one." That is a kind of mathematics no one can understand or explain.

The truth is reasonable, as shown by the Bible, to wit, that Jehovah God is the Almighty One; that Jesus is the Son of God; and that the holy spirit is not a person, but is the invisible power of God operating the things of the universe. In Isaiah 45:5 God says: "I am Jehovah; there is no God beside me." Jesus, the beginning of God's creation, says, at Proverbs 8:22: "Jehovah possessed me in the beginning of His way." Jehovah used Jesus as His active agent in the creation of all things. When on the earth Jesus said (John 12:49): "I have not spoken of myself; but the Father which sent me, he gave me a commandment." At Psalm 40 Jesus said: "I delight to do thy will, O my God." At John 14:28 He said: "My Father is greater than I."

The word "ghost" appearing in the Bible is properly translated "spirit," and the original word shows that it means the power which is invisible to human eyes, exercised by Jehovah. For example: You see the power of electricity operating machinery, but you cannot see electricity. God moves the universe by His power, which is invisible to human eyes, that is, by His holy spirit.

The reason for this false doctrine of the "trinity" is this: Satan at all times has defamed God's name and tried to turn all the people away from the true God. To that end he has deceived and defrauded the people, and the doctrine of the "trinity" is one of his means of deception. Satan disputes the supremacy of Jehovah and if he can induce the people to believe that there are two others that are equal to Jehovah in power, substance and eternity, so the clergy teach, then he induces the people to believe that God is not supreme.

The fact that the oldest church organization amongst men teaches the doctrine of the "trinity" does not make it true. We have now reached the end of the world, and the time is here when the truth is due to be understood and will be understood by all who with unprejudiced mind study the Bible and seek to know the truth. Jehovah God is the truth, from everlasting to everlasting; Christ Jesus is His first creature; and the holy spirit is His power. Soon He will exercise His power to destroy Satan's organization, and only those who believe and serve the truth will survive. If the clergy really believed God and the Bible their sensibilities would not be shocked when someone tells the people what the Bible says about the so-called "trinity." The fact that they are offended, proves that their doctrine is false. It is to your interest to know the truth. Only Jehovah God can give everlasting life, and this He gives through Jesus Christ, His Chief Executive Officer. The harm resulting to men by teaching and believing the false doctrine of the "trinity" is to turn men away from the only source of life. It is written (John 17:3): "This is life eternal, to know thee the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom thou hast sent." The book Reconciliation gives a full explanation of these truths.

A WORTHWHILE OPINION
Arthur Brisbane: "The readers of the smaller newspapers, scattered all over this continent form the most important body of thinking people in this country. Editors of the smaller newspapers constitute a national intellectual police force that keeps a great majority of the 130,000,000 citizens informed as to public happenings. If the great advertisers could be made to realize the extraordinary buying power and advertising value of the local newspapers, the publishers of such newspapers would be rewarded financially as they deserve to be."

THIRD INSTALLMENT

SYNOPSIS: Amos Ethridge is found murdered in a country lane with a crude cross of twigs on his breast and a scented sheet of note paper in his pocket. He was the richest man in the state with power and influence for Governor. With his death came hints of an unsavory private life, of scandal that might come to light if the murder is investigated too closely. Mary Holmes, a former opera singer whose career has been wrecked, lives in squalor nearest the scene of the crime. Gerald Holmes, her son, is both loved and hated by his mother, who tries to forget the past by drowning her sorrow in drink.

The likeness almost wrenched a cry from her lips. "She's very beautiful, mother, very talented and very fine." The boy's eyes were fixed and shining; a breathless, reverent quality had crept into his voice, and it was plain that when he mentioned this girl his soul bowed in worship and his heart paid homage. "She is infinitely superior to me, of course. That's what makes it so wonderful, so incomprehensible. I want you to—well, to make yourself over into what you were so that she can meet you and know you."

There was a moment of silence. Mrs. Holmes broke it by exclaiming harshly, "Forget it!"

Gerald had hurt her bitterly to-night. He had rubbed salt into her wounds. She had fallen low; she became ugly and old and contemptible, had she? Instead of sympathy he gave her a sort of supercilious pity and implied that she was unfit to meet his sweetheart, until she regenerated herself. Instead of sharing her sorrow he went out and made his own life, made for himself a career such as he had robbed her of. The injustice of it! Well, this would be their hour of reckoning, the hour when she would compel him to take up and share the burden that had bowed her shoulders. Those alcoholic demons in the back of her head were dancing dizzily and it gave her a prodigious, wicked satisfaction to realize that she had the power to humble his spirit as he had humbled hers.

"Forget it, Jerry," she repeated. "You can't get a girl like that to marry you."

"I can if we stop right here, mother, and if you'll let me help you—er, get back on your feet."

She wouldn't have you—not the kind of a girl you've been talking about," Mrs. Holmes giggled malevolently. "You see, my boy, you haven't any name to give her."

"Not much of a name, of course, but I'll make one. I'll make it something to be proud of."

Mrs. Holmes rose, walked to the cupboard, opened the door, and took out a thick drinking glass and a square-faced bottle. Slowly she poured the tumbler half full of gin, then drank it; her eyes as they met those of her son were hostile, but there was malignity in her gaze. It was an act of deliberate, calculated defiance for never before had she taken liquor in his presence. Gerald looked on incredulously.

"You don't understand English," she said, harshly. "If you're old enough to run around with women and think about getting married, guess you're old enough to stand some plain talk. You give me one of God knows. A little of your own medicine won't hurt you. What I mean to say is this—your father and I were never married."

Gerald gasped; his face whitened; a look of fright, of object misery, crept over it. "I should have known better than to talk to you when you're—when you're like this," he groaned. "You're not serious, mother?"

"Oh, yes I am! I mean exactly what I say. You're forcing myself on me unpleasant things about myself; now I'll tell you some. I'll have to go back and explain so you'll understand. Opera singers, in my time, were about what they are now, and the profession was about the same. A girl had to exercise every means at her disposal to get to the top. It was the price. Success in any art must be paid for; every great artist has to make some sort of sacrifice. I made mine, but the reward was worth it. It was worth any price Art is so much bigger, so much more life you have to put other things everything else is so small, so trivial, so false and so fleeting. I was young, I had sex appeal, and I had a voice. I used them all to get ahead. I had temperment, too. I loved every role I played; I put vitality and fire into them. When I was on the stage they used to say I was a flaming genius. Flaming!"

Mrs. Holmes tramped about the room as she talked; beneath her feet the bare floor boards creaked.

"I've told you how my big success came about. You know all that and how I was anticipating the day when I could come home and achieve my supreme triumph, here in America. How I met your father—in Paris. It wasn't his first affair, was it, but it was the first time I had ever been genuinely, madly in love. I didn't know I had it in me. I was a perfect fool. Most women are, by the way, at one time or another. He hadn't a thing—money, I mean—so I gave him what I had, my love, and what had been given to me. I showered him with gifts, spoiled him. He took it all and we lived wildly, extravagantly, drunk with each other's love. That temperament again!"

"I suppose it had begun to pall on him even before we learned that you were coming, but he didn't show it. When we discovered that I was going to have a baby I suppose we talked about marriage—people usually do. Probably that helped to spoil things. Perfect love, perfect romance, and one thing—marriage, squalling children, milk bottles, dirty dishes—that was another. He was an artist. You came between us even before you were born."

"He couldn't bear to see the change in me. My appearance got ugly and mean on his nerves. He quit finally—went away. That was a terrible shock to me; it was enough to kill most of the affection I might have felt for you. Oh, I know it sounds unnatural, incredible! That's because you can't understand how some people are constituted. You're full of story-book sentiment; this was real life. Neither of us was domestic. You won't understand, either when I tell you that his desertion wouldn't have left any serious regrets on me; they said, as a matter of fact, that it would make me even a great artist—having suffered. But at least you can understand how it turned me back to my work with a more passionate devotion than ever, since it was all I had left, all that was real and substantial and satisfying. My voice had never been as splendid as it was during that period. My friends told me that a miracle had occurred and that I possessed the most beautiful voice in the world. They worshipped it. They and I, blessed as we were by it. "Then you were born." Again Mrs. Holmes turned her eyes upon her son, and now they were brilliant, feverish; her face was working. "You know what happened? For a while, the doctor encouraged me to believe that my voice would come back. That was to keep me from killing myself. But it didn't come back. It was gone, lost to the world! There were artists in the company who would have strangled you gladly and hung for it, if it would have brought back Mrs. Holmes's voice. That's how much they thought of it. That's what a truly great voice means."

"You wonder why I've never been a real mother to you. God! You've been a living reproach to me; every day of your life you have tortured me. At least I can't say that. Other things, everything else is so small, so trivial, so false and so fleeting. I was young, I had sex appeal, and I had a voice. I used them all to get ahead. I had temperment, too. ## Hints for the Household

Conducted By Betty Barclay

SPRING DISHES

Spring is here, when the juvenile population bursts forth with skipping ropes and games of hop-scotch. Spring is here when the men of the house can't find his favorite pipe, not lost but mislaid in the toposytury of spring cleaning.

Wise wives will turn a soft answer to righteous masculine wrath by serving their lords something "extra special" at dinner. Here are a few of the recipe weapons with which poor weak women may arm herself and restore domestic tranquillity.

Pineapple Pie

1 package lemon-flavored gelatin
2 tablespoons sugar
1/4 teaspoon salt
1 cup boiling water
2 egg yolks
1 cup pineapple juice
1/4 cups drained, crushed pineapple
1 baked 9-inch pie shell
Combine gelatin, sugar, salt and 2 tablespoons water. Add egg yolks and stir well. Add remaining water gradually, stirring until gelatin is dissolved. Add pineapple juice. Chill. When slightly thickened, fold in pineapple. Turn into cold pie shell until firm. Cover with meringue, or top with whipped cream.

Deviled Ham Rolls

2 cups sifted flour
2 teaspoons double-acting baking powder
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/4 cups butter or other shortening
3/4 cup milk (about)
1 cup deviled ham
Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder and salt, sift again. Cut in shortening. Add milk gradually, stirring until soft dough is formed. Turn out on slightly floured board and knead 30 seconds, or enough to shape. Roll 1/4 inch thick and cut in 2-inch squares. Place about 1 teaspoon deviled ham in the center of each square. Fold dough over ham, pinch sides together, and shape into roll; then seal ends. Place seam-side down on ungreased baking sheet; bake in hot oven (450 degrees F.) 12 to 15 minutes. Makes 36 rolls.

"Not exactly a 'good time'." Gerald said, with an effort to speak naturally. "I was too much upset by the news of Mr. Ethridge's death. It must have been a terrible shock to Miss Woods and to all of you."

"Yeah!" Jacob nodded. "It caused quite a stir all over town. 'All Judah did Hezekiah honor at his death.' D'you think they'll ever find out who done it?"

"I hope so. I can't bear to think—you are, he did a great deal for me. He was a real friend."

"He treated me all right too, but Jacob shook his white head. "A lot of things about him we don't know, Jerry. A lot nobody knows. The Lord works in a mysterious way and the wicked is doomed to destruction."

This Week in Washington

Whenever political wisecracks begin to talk about Presidential "dark horses" somebody is sure to bring up the name of John R. McCarl, Comptroller General of the United States. That suggestion is generally met by a practically unanimous chorus of: "He would make a good President, if he could be elected, and he would make a fine candidate, if he could be nominated. But has he a chance?"

What brings Mr. McCarl into the limelight just at this time is the fact that his 15-year term of office expires on the 30th day of June this year. This raises, among other questions, the question of whom President Roosevelt will appoint in his place; because the outgoing Comptroller General is not eligible for re-appointment.

If Congress were in session on June 30, the President would have to make a permanent appointment to be confirmed by the Senate. But Congress will not be in session, and that leaves the President free to make an interim appointment to anybody he chooses to name, regardless of Senatorial wishes. The interim appointee will hold office until the next Congress meets, when the next President, either Mr. Roosevelt or his successor, must submit the name of somebody to fill the job for another 15 years.

Introducing John McCarl

There are wheel-horses in the present Democratic administration, as there were wheel-horses in previous Republican administrations who would prefer to see a man in the Comptroller-General job that would take a more lenient view in the spending of the taxpayers' money. But that is just what John McCarl has always refused to do. He hasn't played ball at all the way the politicians who were responsible for having him put in the office expected him to play.

The idea of having a Comptroller-General, to see that all money spent by the Federal Government was used in precisely the way Congress prescribed, that no discretion should be allowed to any Federal officer or bureau and that he should be responsible only to Congress, was originated by the Republican majority in Congress during 1919-20.

It came as a result of the more or less unregulated spending of the Wilson Administration in war time. President Wilson vetoed the first bill creating the office of Comptroller-General, because it prohibited the President from removing the incumbent from office and gave the executive no control of supervision of his activities. Senator Warren G. Harding was one of the leading advocates of the idea of an independent accounting officer.

Promptly after Mr. Harding became President, in 1921, the office was created by act of Congress and Mr. Harding picked John McCarl to fill in, because McCarl had always been a staunch Republican in Nebraska, where he still maintains a voting residence at McCook; he had been Secretary of the Republican Congressional Executive Committee through one or two campaigns, and at the time of his appointment he was private secretary to Senator George W. Norris, of Nebraska.

The McCarl Shock

McCarl took office July 1, 1921. He had not been in office more than a few minutes before his political friends found that the expense accounts of Republican office-holders were just as much objects of suspicion as if they had been presented by Democrats.

For 15 years every dollar spent by or in behalf of the Federal Government has had to be okayed by the Comptroller-General. He has nothing to do with preparing the budget, but after the items of the budget have been enacted into law, he has everything to do with seeing to it that no department, bureau or individual spends more than has been specifically authorized by law or spends money appropriated for one purpose for some other purpose. There is no appeal from his decisions.

It follows that nobody knows as much about the handling of the Government's cash as does John R. McCarl. He knows every trick ever invented to wrangle money out of the Treasury without authority.

One reason why the public has not heard more of the Comptroller-General is that his conception of his duty has compelled him to lead almost a cloistered life, officially at least. He is the hardest man in Washington to interview. In his 15 years of service he has never once been quoted for publication in the only newspaper men, but politicians of all grades and varieties, find it practically impossible to pry their way into his office.

Guarded His Position

McCarl has always taken pains never to expose himself to any kind of political pressure or contacts which might, in the case of a weaker man, warp the fine line between what is right and what is politically permissible. He adheres rigidly to the letter of the law and insists that every other public servant do the same. If they don't like it, let them get the law changed.

Mr. McCarl is only 56 years old now. He may not be the Republican nominee; indeed, it is quite improbable that he will be, if for no other reason than that politicians of his own party have discovered that he will not play politics in public office.

In the event that a Republican President should be elected next Fall, Washington feels pretty certain that John McCarl will be high in the councils of the new Administration; perhaps Secretary of the Treasury or the Director of the Budget.

When Robinson Crusoe Made History

One of the most persistent advertisers in the history of success was Robinson Crusoe. He knew what he wanted and put up an ad for one. He flung a shirt on a pole, at the top of his island, that, in the language of the sea, was plain to every seafaring man.

The circulation was small—there was no other medium, but Crusoe kept at it, despite the fact that he got no enquiries for a long time. He changed his copy—as one garment after another frayed out—and in the end got what he wanted.

Suppose Crusoe had taken down that signal after a time and declared, "Advertising doesn't pay." Where would he and his story be now?

Put up your signal and keep it there. Crusoe advertised under very discouraging circumstances. You have got a sure thing—it is only necessary to have the patience, persistence and pluck of Robinson Crusoe.

See The Wainwright Star. Let us plan an advertising campaign for you.

Nancy Hart's HOME NEWS

Don't expect to make a cosmetic face, is the advice of a famous beauty expert. "Creams and lotions are designed to supplement, not substitute for, natural functions," she says. "If you are thin, nervous, not eating sufficient food, and a well-balanced diet including the necessary fuel foods as well as vegetables, don't expect a cream applied to your skin externally to take the place of nourishment from within. It may surprise you to find that eating more butter, sweet cream, cereals, meat and fish, milk and eggs will not only help you to gain weight but will also make an improvement in your skin. Look to your health first."

Greeting cards especially designed for the various members of the family circle are widely in vogue this Easter. They range from formal missives to sprightly booklets illustrated with casual line-drawings. Husband and Wife, Father and Mother, Aunt and Uncle, Brother and Sister, all have their special cards, including not only designs for the adult reader, but also designs of juvenile appeal, for the youngsters to send to Daddy and Mummy.

Household Hint: A handy and quickly prepared parsley garnish may be kept in store and used when there is no time for more elaborate garnishes. Take a handful of clean fresh parsley and place it in a moderate oven for a short time. Then rub between the hands till it powders, and store it in an airtight glass jar. It will keep its bright color for some time and always be ready for use.

Patent leather is going to be very popular this year. You'll be wearing it on your head, on your feet and even on suits and dresses. And if you rub this shiny leather with a clean cloth dipped in glycerine occasionally, it will keep it from drying and cracking.
